lashes of lightning, and it was followed by the heaviest rain of the year,

ROANOKE, VA., March 7.—Following a fall of one to four inches of snow in this section to-day, and with freezing weather to-night, Roanoke experienced a thunderstorm that lasted several hours. The peals of thunder were loud and fong and the hashes of lightning were vivid. The like has not been witnessed here before. The thunder-storm was accompanied by hall and rain.

CLIFTON FORGE, VA., March 7.—With the ground covered with gagw, and snow and hall falling to-night, there was a severe thunder-storm prevailing here at the same time. The flashes of lightning and the heals of thunder were similar to those on a hot day in midsummer.

AMELIA C. H., VA., March 7.—Snow commenced failing here about 2:30 this morning on hard-frozen ground. It snowed for two hours, and by 12:30 was raining.

TAZEWELL, VA. March 7.—A severe electrical storm passed over Taxewell early to-night. So far as heard no damag has been done.
